South Pasadena, CA, May 5, 2008 – GreenSoft Technology, Inc. (formerly Pacific Oaks Technology, Inc.), a leading provider of environmental compliance content management tools and services for the global electronics industry, today released GreenData Manager, a desktop application to manage green compliance data and documents. A 30-day free trial is available immediately at www.greensofttech.com. GreenData Manager helps collect and manage the full range of green compliance data: RoHS compliance status and certificates from suppliers, material composition substance data, MSL and peak temperature data for Pb-free manufacturing, tin-whisker mitigation strategies, and more. GreenData Manager will also:

- Validate compliance information against EU RoHS, China RoHS, Korea RoHS, Halogen-Free, and even the recent Norwegian PoHS
- Report the compliance status on all parts or BOMs
- Provide validation on the required material composition substances for each component and aggregate the status to products or BOMs
- Determine if test reports or certificates need to be recollected

"Compliance data collection is a frustrating task at many companies," said Larry Yen, president and CEO of GreenSoft Technology, Inc. "Data collection is mandatory but companies have limited resources. We believe we've developed a tool that will be very helpful to companies as they work to comply with global environmental regulations." GreenSoft has experience gathering component information from over 5,000 suppliers worldwide. GreenData Manager enables a user to tap into that expertise and easily outsource data collection to GreenSoft. "This combination of a user-friendly application and access to GreenSoft's component data and experience is very powerful," said Mr. Yen. "We know that it will make users more productive and add to the bottom line." GreenData Manager is available for Windows XP or Vista. A 30-day trial version is available for download at www.greensofttech.com/gdm.html. A single-user license is $299.
